The Asia-Pacific Journal: Japan Focus

In-depth critical analysis of the forces shaping the Asia-Pacific . . . and the world. The Asia-Pacific Journal seeks to illuminate the geopolitics, economics, history, society, culture, international relations and forces for change in the modern and contemporary Asia-Pacific.

The Asia-Pacific Journal: Japan Focus is a 501 (C) (3) non-profit organization recognized by the Internal Revenue Service. Contributions are tax deductible. This peer-reviewed, open source journal is a fully indexed resource. Its website contains more than 2,000 articles. What's Hot leverages the online, open source format to present concise interventions on breaking contemporary events that complement longer and more fully annotated articles. Course Readers make the best work of the journal accessible to teachers and students for classroom use. In addition to articles prepared for the journal, it offers translations from Japanese, Chinese, Korean and other languages.

Subscribers receive a free weekly newsletter published each Monday, normally linking to three to seven new articles. Readers on six continents access 100,000 to 150,000 articles each month. More than 12,000 people in 195 countries presently subscribe to APJ, approximately half through our Newsletter, while the other half follow us through Facebook or Twitter. All articles are indexed by author, title and key word. Peer review process recognized by Ulrich's Global Serial Directory.

Subscribers to the Newsletter receive a weekly announcement with links to new articles. Facebook and Twitter subscribers receive immediate information about new articles as they are posted. Tax deductible contributions may be made on our home page via Paypal or by credit card.

Comment on articles

Readers are invited to comment and discuss all articles at the site. To comment, go to the end of the article. This is a moderated list that welcomes discussion but eliminates flames. We ask those who wish to comment to give their full real name.

Recommended citation

All articles since 2009 contain a recommended citation at the end of the article in the following form:

Recommended citation: Author, "Title," The Asia-Pacific Journal, Vol 11, Issue 51 No 2, December 23, 2013 where Vol 11 refers to 2012, issue 51 to the 51st issue of the year and No 2 to the second article. For earlier articles, the recommended citation consists of author, title and date of publication.

Search engine

The Asia-Pacific Journal has a powerful search engine at the top left of the home page. The top box allows you to search by author, the second box by title. Entering an author's surname or given name brings up all articles by the author. Entering a term such as China, Japan, Korea, or war, peace, or immigration, or a phrase like Battle of Okinawa or atomic bomb in the second box will bring up all articles whose title includes that word or phrase. To search within articles, click on keyword search and enter the word or phrase you are searching for such as atomic bomb, Korean War, mass suicide or worker rights. (do not put the word or phrase in "quotes".) This brings up a list of all articles which include the word or phrase. If you open any article on the list and do a search for the word or phrase, when you scroll down the item will be highlighted. Close the article to go to another article by clicking on the arrow at the top of the screen. You will be told "To display this page, Firefox must send information . . . etc." (Other browsers may use a different method.) Hit resend and you will return to the list of articles and you can continue to search. You can also use the Advanced Search function to search beyond our site using Google. For best results, use Firefox or Safari search engines. We welcome questions about the search engine and suggestions for improvement of our system.

The Asia-Pacific Journal is the recipient of The Ryukyu Shimpō's first Ikemiyagi Syuui Prize. The award recognizes that "Japan Focus has made an outstanding worldwide contribution to proposing solutions to problems confronting Okinawa."
